Part B — In-Class Activity

Activity 1 — The Dialogue Within

Pick one desire/expectation you have. Compare it with what you really want to be (your natural acceptance), and note whether they are in harmony or contradiction.

What I am (a desire / expectation)	What I really want to be (natural acceptance)	In harmony or contradiction? → happiness/unhappiness
I want to earn a lot of money quickly	To live a fulfilling and peaceful life with meaningful relationships	Contradiction → unhappiness
I expect my friend to always agree with me	To be a supportive and understanding person	Contradiction → unhappiness

Activity 2 — Natural Acceptance vs Liking

For each example, write what you LIKE and the deeper thing you NATURALLY ACCEPT.

Example	I like...	I naturally accept...
Waking early or late	Waking late on weekends	Waking early enough to have a calm, productive day
Playing with toys / travelling the world	Playing video games	Exploring new places and learning about different cultures
Food from a particular restaurant	Pizza from a specific chain	Eating nutritious food that keeps me healthy

Activity 3 — Content of Self-exploration

Answer for yourself (Yes / No):

- Do I desire happiness? Do I desire prosperity? Do I desire the continuity of both?
- If the continuity of happiness and prosperity were ensured, what else would I desire?
- Do I desire happiness? Yes
- Do I desire prosperity? Yes
- Do I desire the continuity of both? Yes
- If the continuity of happiness and prosperity were ensured, what else would I desire? I would desire to help others achieve the same, and to explore my full potential in creativity, service, and relationships.

Activity 4 — Which Process is Naturally Acceptable to You?

Tick one and say why:

- Self-exploration / self-verification on your own right, leading to understanding in yourself, OR
- A process of do's and don'ts, assuming what is said without verification.

I tick Self-exploration / self-verification on your own right, leading to understanding in yourself. Because it allows me to discover what is true for me through my own reasoning and experience, rather than blindly following rules, which leads to genuine and lasting understanding.

Part C — Long-Answer Questions

Q1. Explain self-exploration as "the dialogue within." Between which two things does it take place, and what is the outcome when they are in harmony and when in contradiction?

Self-exploration as "the dialogue within" refers to the internal conversation between my 'self' (what I really am) and my 'self-image' (what I think I am). When they are in harmony, the outcome is clarity, confidence, and a feeling of being in tune with my natural acceptance. When they are in contradiction, the outcome is confusion, conflict, and a sense of being unsettled or unhappy.

Q2. What is natural acceptance? List its characteristics.

Natural acceptance is the innate, unconditional, and unchanging approval or acceptance of what is right and true within oneself, without any external pressure or condition. Its characteristics are:

1. It is innate – present in every human being from birth.
2. It is unconditional – not dependent on any external factor or reward.
3. It is unchanging – it does not vary with time, place, or situation.
4. It is self-evident – it does not require proof or external validation.
5. It is the basis for right understanding and harmony.

Q3. Describe the content and the process of self-exploration.

The content of self-exploration is the exploration of my own desires, thoughts, beliefs, and values to understand what is truly fulfilling and what is not. The process involves a continuous dialogue within myself where I question my assumptions, verify them through my own experience and natural acceptance, and move towards a state of harmony between my 'self' and my 'self-image'. It is not a one-time activity but an ongoing journey of self-discovery and self-verification.
