Part A — Key Ideas (Recap)

• Happiness = to be in a state of harmony (naturally acceptable); unhappiness = to be forced into disharmony/contradiction.

- Continuity of happiness = harmony at all four levels: human being, family, society, nature/existence.
- Prosperity = the feeling of having/producing more than the required physical facility.
- A prosperous person thinks of right utilisation and nurturing the other; a deprived person of accumulation and exploiting the other.
- Physical facility: identification, production, consuming (right utilisation), sharing, storage — what is naturally acceptable is right utilisation.
- Happiness = to be in a state of harmony (naturally acceptable); unhappiness = to be forced into disharmony/contradiction.
- Continuity of happiness = harmony at all four levels: human being, family, society, nature/existence.
- Prosperity = the feeling of having/producing more than the required physical facility.
- A prosperous person thinks of right utilisation and nurturing the other; a deprived person of accumulation and exploiting the other.
- Physical facility: identification, production, consuming (right utilisation), sharing, storage — what is naturally acceptable is right utilisation.

Part B — In-Class Activity

Activity 1 — Harmony = Happiness, Disharmony = Unhappiness

Classify each state as Happiness (harmony) or Unhappiness (disharmony).

State / situation	Happiness or Unhappiness?
Clarity / solution within	Happiness
Confusion / problem within	Unhappiness
In harmony with family members	Happiness
In conflict / opposition with others	Unhappiness

Activity 2 — Continuity = Harmony at Four Levels

Write the four levels of being at which harmony must be ensured for continuity of happiness.

1. Human being
2. Family
3. Society
4. Nature/existence

Activity 3 — Prosperous or Deprived?

Complete the contrast and then reflect.

How much physical facility is “required” for you? On what basis would you decide?

A prosperous person thinks of...

right utilisation and nurturing the other sharing and ensuring others' needs are met

A deprived person thinks of...

accumulation and exploiting the other hoarding and competing for more

For me, the required physical facility is enough to ensure my physical comfort, health, and the ability to fulfil my responsibilities without excess. I would decide on the basis of my natural acceptance — what is sufficient for a harmonious life at the individual, family, and societal levels, not driven by greed or comparison with others.

A prosperous person thinks of...	A deprived person thinks of... right utilisation and nurturing the other	accumulation and exploiting the other
sharing and ensuring others' needs are met	hoarding and competing for more

Activity 4 — Handling Physical Facility

Number the steps in order and mark what is naturally acceptable (right utilisation / indulgence / renunciation): identification, production, consuming, sharing, storage.

1. identification — right utilisation
2. production — right utilisation
3. consuming — indulgence
4. sharing — renunciation
5. storage — indulgence

Part C — Long-Answer Questions

Q1. Define happiness and unhappiness as presented, and explain what is meant by "continuity of happiness."

Happiness is the state of harmony within oneself and with others, arising from right understanding and right feelings. Unhappiness is the state of disharmony or conflict, resulting from lack of understanding or wrong expectations. "Continuity of happiness" means that happiness is not momentary or dependent on external circumstances, but is a sustained state achieved through living in accordance with one's natural acceptance and values.

Q2. What is prosperity? Distinguish between a prosperous person and a deprived person.

Prosperity is the feeling of having more than enough physical facilities to meet one's needs, combined with the assurance that one can share with others. A prosperous person feels content and fulfilled, has no sense of lack, and is willing to share. A deprived person feels inadequate, constantly craves more, and is unable to share due to a perceived or actual shortage.

Q3. Explain why clarity about the basic human aspiration is important, and what our program is for fulfilling it.

Clarity about the basic human aspiration — continuous happiness and prosperity — is important because it gives direction to all our efforts and prevents confusion between temporary pleasures and true fulfillment. Without this clarity, we may pursue material accumulation or sensory gratification, leading to conflict and dissatisfaction. Our program for fulfilling it is to develop right understanding (self-exploration), right feelings in relationships, and right utilisation of physical facilities, ensuring harmony at all levels: individual, family, society, and nature.
