Part B — In-Class Activity

Activity 1: Match each action of Hiware Bazar to its dimension: Education-sanskar, Justice-suraksha, Production-work, or Health-sanyam.

Action	Dimension
Compulsory water-management course in school	Education-sanskar
Planting ~10 lakh trees; growing fodder instead of grazing	Production-work
Participative, transparent gram sabha	Justice-suraksha
Organic farming; tubewell only for drinking water	Health-sanyam
No cars within the village; cycles within, car pools outside	Health-sanyam
No sweepers hired — residents do the work	Justice-suraksha

Activity 2: Integrated vs Fragmented society

List the features of each, as shown in the deck, and then reflect on your own family.

- Integrated family/society — features: _____
- Fragmented family/society — features (manmani, money is everything…): _____
- Your family's goal: _____ | Your family's program: _____
- How does each member of your family participate?
- Integrated family/society — features: Mutual trust, respect, cooperation, shared goals, collective decision-making, fulfillment in relationships, harmony.
- Fragmented family/society — features (manmani, money is everything…): Selfishness, competition, lack of trust, individual interests dominate, money and power are prioritized, relationships are transactional, conflicts are common.
- Your family's goal: To ensure the well-being and happiness of all members through mutual care and support. | Your family's program: Regular family meetings, shared responsibilities, open communication, and budgeting for collective needs.
- How does each member of your family participate? Each member contributes according to their ability: parents provide financial and emotional support, children help with chores and studies, and everyone participates in decision-making and celebrations.

Part C — Long-Answer Questions

Q1. What is the goal, and what is the program, followed by the village society of Hiware Bazar? [5]

The goal of Hiware Bazar is to achieve a self-reliant, harmonious, and prosperous village where all members live with mutual trust, respect, and fulfillment. The program includes collective water management, organic farming, prohibition of alcohol, participatory governance through the gram sabha, and community-driven development projects that balance production, health, education, and justice.

Q2. Distinguish an integrated family / society from a fragmented one, as shown in the deck. [5]

An integrated family/society is characterized by mutual trust, respect, cooperation, shared goals, and collective decision-making, where relationships are based on fulfillment and harmony. In contrast, a fragmented family/society is driven by selfishness, competition, lack of trust, and the prioritization of money and power over relationships, leading to conflicts and isolation.

Q3. The deck shows villages where income rose but the misuse of money increased. What two questions does it ask about physical facility, and what is the deeper point? [5]

The two questions are: (1) Does physical facility ensure happiness? (2) Does physical facility ensure right understanding? The deeper point is that without right understanding and ethical values, increased physical facilities (money) can lead to misuse, greed, and social fragmentation, proving that material prosperity alone does not guarantee human happiness or harmony.

Q4. List the four indicators of a humane society given in the deck, and state what each measures. [5]

1. Education-sanskar — measures the level of right understanding and value-based education in the society.
2. Health-sanyam — measures the physical and mental well-being and self-restraint of individuals.
3. Production-work — measures the sustainable and need-based production and work participation.
4. Justice-suraksha — measures the fairness, transparency, and security in social and legal systems.

Q5. Reflect on your own family's goal, program and the participation of each member, and compare with Hiware Bazar. [5]

My family's goal is to ensure the well-being and happiness of all members through mutual care and support. Our program includes regular family meetings, shared responsibilities, open communication, and budgeting for collective needs. Each member participates according to their ability: parents provide financial and emotional support, children help with chores and studies, and everyone contributes to decision-making. Compared to Hiware Bazar, our family is smaller and less formal, but we share the same principles of mutual trust, collective effort, and shared goals. However, Hiware Bazar's community-wide programs like water management and participatory governance are more structured and comprehensive, which we could learn from to strengthen our own family systems.

Self-Reflection (Take-Home)

• Does man influence society/system, or must man conform to it? Is there space in the current system for individuals to participate? (Slide 4)

• What is your family's goal and program, and how does each member participate? (Slide 4)

• Man influences society/system; individuals can and do shape systems through their choices, actions, and participation. There is space in the current system for individuals to participate, especially through local governance, community initiatives, and conscious lifestyle choices, as demonstrated by Hiware Bazar.
